

Motherly Devotion.

The late Queen Mary of Bavaria is said to have been as warmly devoted and blindly obedient to her son, King Ludwig II, as she had been to her husband, King Max. From the day of his accession, she looked upon him more as a king than a son.

A story is told which shows how dearly mother and son loved each other. They were gazing out of one of the windows in the frescoed hall of Hohenenschwangau, with one of the finest views in the world before them—the green Schwabsee in the foreground, the pine clad hills reflected in its pure surface, and above all, the noble mountains stretching on every side. The king drank in the wild beauty of lake and mountain, and raised his eyes to the sky. The queen, who never soared too high, gazed with delight at an imposing pine which towered high above the window at which they stood. Suddenly the queen exclaimed: "What a glorious Christmas tree this would make if we could decorate it!"

The king passed his hand over his eyes, smiled and kissed her. That was in August. In December he expressed a wish to spend Christmas at Hohenenschwangau. The queen, always willing to do what he wished, followed him thither. On Christmas eve, with loving care, she decorated a little tree, and, as in the days when she was a mother of 20, she rang the bell to call her children. The great event of the evening seemed over, the lights were blown out, when suddenly a gong sounded, King Ludwig took his mother's hand, and, leading her to the window out of which they had gazed together that morning in August, he pushed back the shutters and disclosed to her astonished eyes the gigantic tree lighted with a thousand wax candles, which burned bright in the frosty night and were reflected in the snow and icicles on trees and shrubs around.—London Globe.

The Specter Guest.

An undertaker in Madrid, who lived over his shop, one night gave a grand ball. At the height of the festivities a gentleman in full evening dress joined the company. He danced with the hostess and her daughter; he danced with the guests. He seemed to enjoy himself thoroughly. The undertaker thought he recognized the face, but didn't like to be rude and ask the stranger's name. By and by all the guests departed and only the unknown was left.

"Shall I send for a cab for you?" said the host at last.

"No, thank you; I'm staying in the house."

"Staying in the house! Who are you, sir?"

"Why, don't you know me? I'm the corpse that was brought in this afternoon."

The undertaker in horror rushed to the mortuary chamber, where in Spain it is usual for the dead to be removed. The coffin was empty. His wife and daughter had been dancing with a corpse!

But it turned out that the gentleman had only been in a trance and had suddenly recovered. Hearing the revelry above, and being possessed of a keen though ghastly sense of humor, he had got out of his coffin and joined the festive party. He was presentable, for in Spain the dead are generally buried in full evening dress.—New York Herald.

Cassowary Fishing.

The habits of the cassowary and of our native fish hawk are generally known. Their methods of taking fish are very much like those of birds of prey. But the cassowary fishes according to a method of its own. Mr. Powell witnessed its operations on a river in the island of New Britain:

I saw a cassowary come down to the water's edge, and stand for some minutes apparently watching the water carefully. It then stepped into the river where it was about three feet deep, and, partially squatting down, spread its wings out, submerging them, the feathers being spread and ruffled.

The bird remained perfectly motionless, and kept its eyes closed, as if in sleep. It remained in this position for fully a quarter of an hour, when, suddenly closing its wings and straightening its feathers, it stepped out on the bank. Here it shook itself several times, whereupon a quantity of small fishes fell out of its wings, and from amidst its feathers, which the bird immediately picked up and swallowed.

The fishes had evidently mistaken the feathers for a kind of weed that grows in the water along the banks of the rivers in this island, and which very much resembles the feathers of the cassowary. The smaller fishes hide in these weeds to avoid the larger ones that prey on them.—Youth's Companion.

Equine Inconsistency.

A horse is a queer animal. It knows more than any other animal, except a dog, and we have seen a dog that was afraid of its own shadow. The other day, while the horse of Charles Ketchum was standing at the station, the Walkill Valley and Erie trains both came rushing past it with steam blowing off. The horse not as much as raised its ears. The wind, however, moved a little piece of white paper on the ground about half the size of an envelope, and the horse was ready to make tracks for Comfort's Hill without heeding the notice on our new iron bridge.—Montgomery Standard.

A Simple Scientific Experiment.

Take a bottle and place a cork over the mouth. The cork must be sufficiently large to rest lightly upon it, without falling into the neck. Snap the neck of the bottle sharply with the thumb and finger, and the cork will fall from the bottle towards the hand giving the blow, and not away from it, as might be expected. This effect is due to the principle of inertia, the quick blow forcing, as it were, the bottle away from the cork before the motion can be transmitted to the cork itself.—Buffalo Times.

Nervous Diseases.

There are more nervous than blood diseases. Thus, a weakness of the nerves of the brain causes headache, fits, dizziness, sleeplessness, etc.; a weakness of the nerves of the stomach causes dyspepsia, pain, wind, etc.; of the lungs, makes "weak lungs"; of the liver produces biliousness, constipation, etc.; of the womb induces irregularities, sterility, pains, etc.; of the system, impotency, etc. For all weakness Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine surpasses all other remedies. The Blessing of Childhood.

Blessed be childhood, which brings down something of heaven into the midst of our rough earthliness. These 80,000 daily births, of which statistics tell us, represent as it were an effusion of innocence and freshness, struggling not only against the death of the race, but against human corruption and the universal gangrene of sin. All the good and wholesome feeling which is intertwined with childhood and the cradle is one of the secrets of the providential government of the world. Suppress this life giving dew and human society would be scorched and devastated by selfish passion. Supposing that humanity had been composed of a thousand millions of immortal beings, whose number could neither increase nor diminish, where should we be and what should we be? A thousand times more learned, no doubt, but a thousand times more evil. There would have been a vast accumulation of science, but all the virtues engendered by suffering and devotion—that is to say, by the family and society—would have no existence. And for this there would be no compensation. Blessed be childhood for the good that it does, and for the good which it brings about carelessly and unconsciously by simply making us love it and letting itself be loved. What little of paradise we see still on earth is due to its presence among us. Without fatherhood, without motherhood, I think that love itself would not be enough to prevent men from devouring each other—men, that is to say, such as human passions have made them. The angels have no need of birth and death as foundations for their life, because their life is heavenly.—Amiel's Journal, translated by Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

Strategy and Tactics.

A battle does not consist, as many imagine, in a grand advance of victorious lines of attack, sweeping everything before them, or the helter-skelter flight of the unfortunate defeated. The historian must so present it in his descriptions, the artist in his paintings. Even the writer of an official account must limit himself to the presentation of such moments as demand special treatment, or to such episodes as involve important and instructive tactical movements. All those events which are less striking, nevertheless, contribute to the final result, cannot be reproduced without too much expansion. Those incidents which no account of the battle, official or unofficial, takes any note of, the thousand and one events observed only by the participants, the innumerable cases in which the direction and control of affairs glide out of the hands of the officers—these are the little drops of water that make the mighty ocean of battle and determine victory or defeat.—United States.

Mistaking a Royalty.

One night at a reception at Mrs. Ronalds' while I was perched upon a sofa watching the brilliant assemblage, I fell into conversation with a pleasant gentleman seated beside me, who was very curious about America and American life. I told him a great deal about America, and said that Americans in England would not at once know how to address people properly. "As for me," I said, "I am as green as a gooseberry on this subject; even if I supposed you were one of the nobility I should not know how to address you." A few moments afterward Mrs. Ronalds said to me: "Mr. Wilder, that's a good thing you've been saying to the Duke of Teck; you've made an impression upon his highness." I replied: "Why, I haven't met the Duke of Teck; the only gentleman I've been talking to is standing over there." "Well," says Mrs. Ronalds, "that is the Duke of Teck." Gracious! I am a little enough fellow by nature, but just then you might have put me in a pint cup.—Marshall P. Wilder's Book.

Paper Pencils.

One of the difficulties which have stood in the way of the substitution of paper pulp for wood in the manufacture of pencils has been the toughness of the paper covering, and its consequent resistance to the action of a knife. By a new process which has been patented, the molecular cohesion of the paper is modified in such a manner that it can be cut as easily as cedar wood. The paper is first of all made into tubes, and a quantity of them are placed in a frame at the lower end of a cylinder. The substance which is to be used as a marking material is placed in the cylinder while in a plastic condition, and sufficient pressure is then applied to force it into the hollow centers of the paper tubes. After the completion of the process the pencils are gradually dried at increasing temperatures during a period of six days, and they are then plunged into a vessel of molten paraffine wax, which has the effect of modifying the texture of paper pulp as described.—Manufacturers and Industries.

The Weight of Individuals.

The average weight of a boy at birth is seven and that of a girl a little more than six pounds. When they have attained the full development of man or womanhood they should weigh twenty times as much as they did at birth. This would make a man's average weight 140 and a woman's about 125. The height of a male at birth is 1 foot 8 inches and that of a female 1 foot 6 inches. Fully grown, a man's height should be about three and a half times greater than at birth, or 5 feet 9 inches, while a woman should be 5 feet 3 inches. The weight of individuals who are fully developed and well formed, however, varies within extremes, which are nearly as 1 to 2, while their height varies within limits which at most are as 1 to 1.3. Taking 200 pounds as the maximum of man's weight and 85 as the minimum we would have the average of 142½ pounds. Placing the maximum weight of woman at 135 pounds and the minimum at 70 pounds, and we get an average of 127½ pounds.—Philadelphia Record.

"Saved by Faith."

A druggist's wife in Steubenville, O., had not been able to do her own work for years. She had tried all climates and doctors without relief, is now cured of weakness known only to women. You ask what cured her: faith enough to use a few bottles of Milton's nerve and lung food. You try it. Sample bottle free. Sold by I. Leist, a. 4. l. m.

The following is taken from the Cuyahoga Falls Reporter of July 19. It is a center shot unlooked for a paper like our Falls neighbor, that is now a full-fledged Republican journal: "Lexox, Taylor Co., Ia., July 3.—The farmers here are beginning to study the reasons of the depression among the laboring class; but Republican sophistry, which is like Jeff. Davis's sophistry about slavery, yet fools a great many of them. The tariff taxes them from 25 cents to $2 on $1 worth of stuff; but they can sell $1 worth of their produce for only $1, having no 'protection' themselves. Yet many of them seem to be ignorant of the fact that they give so much boot in every trade. A bushel of wheat or barrel of corn will not buy as much sugar or salt or cotton or woolen goods as formerly, though the nominal price of all these things is lower. That something is wrong is conclusively proved by the fact that most other classes are prosperous—the professional classes, the railroad men and the merchants.

The farmer pays too much boot money on his exchanges. The tariff taxes him from 25 cents to $2 on a dollar's worth of goods; but he can sell one dollar's worth of his produce for only one dollar, on account of his having no 'protection' on his goods. A great many of them do not seem to understand wherein they pay so much boot on every trade they make, yet they know that a bushel of wheat or corn will not buy as much sugar, or salt, or cotton or woolen goods as it formerly would, though the price of these things is lower. That something is wrong is proven without a doubt by the fact that the merchant, the professional and the railroad man is prosperous. Too much tariff tax.

No one who, fatigued by over exertion of body or mind, has ever experienced the reviving influence of a tumbler of hot milk, heated as hot as it can be sipped, will willingly forego a resort to it because of its being rendered by heating somewhat less acceptable to the palate. The promptness with which its cordial influence is felt is indeed surprising. Some portion of it seems to be digested and appropriated almost immediately, and many who have been exhausted by fatigue when proven without a doubt by the fact that the merchant, the professional and the railroad man is prosperous. Too much tariff tax.
